Craftsman ys4500 mower belt

Your vehicle's serpentine belt is a vital component that keeps your auto running smoothly. Here's more information about what serpentine belts do, and how to spot serpentine belt problems.

Serpentine Belt Function

In the past, automobiles were built with individual belts for the power steering, air conditioning, alternator and other components. Today, modern vehicles are manufactured with one long serpentine belt that functions for all of the above under-hood components. In some vehicles, the serpentine belt also runs the water pump. Serpentine belts keep components spinning, and prevent metal-on-metal damage from adjacent parts. Serpentine belts are like giant rubber bands that can wear out over time. However, most will last between 60,000 and 100,000 miles.

Sounds of Serpentine Belt Problems

Serpentine belts often make noises when they're slipping or worn. You may hear a loud squealing noise when you start the car. If the belt is noisy, the belt may simply be wet from being splashed by a deep puddle or standing water you drove through. If there's an oil or antifreeze spill on the serpentine belt, the materials can cause belt slippage. Water-splashed serpentine belts will dry. Oil- or antifreeze-splashed belts should be replaced, and the source of the oil or antifreeze leak must be fixed to avoid the problem recurring.

Visual and Performance Signs of Serpentine Belt Problems

Periodically inspect your serpentine belt, even if it isn't giving you any problems. Ribbed serpentine belts may show signs of chipping, cracking or fraying. Missing or too-close ribs are indication of a failing serpentine belt. If the belt is wearing unevenly, it may be misaligned. The misalignment can indicate a problem with the pulley, which should be investigated. Performance issues with the serpentine belt may manifest in a battery that drains more rapidly than usual. Your power steering or air conditioning may fail. A check-engine light is another sign that can indicate your serpentine belt is ready for replacement.

Self-Tensioner Replacement

Many modern serpentine belts are installed with self-tensioning devices. Other serpentine belts require mechanical adjustment from time to time to keep them at the proper tension. Your mechanic can tighten (or show you how to tighten) your serpentine belt if you aren't sure how. Both manual and self-tensioning devices can wear out over time and require replacement. Some experts recommend always replacing tensioners when the serpentine belts are replaced, since a broken tensioner will make your vehicle stop running.

Serpentine Belt Care

Aside from adjusting your serpentine belt (if mechanically adjusted) and visually inspecting the belt, serpentine belts require very little attention. Avoid spilling any type of lubricant or antifreeze on it. If you put a lot of wear and tear on your vehicle, have your mechanic routinely inspect your serpentine belt, since it may wear prematurely.

MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET Buying a belt for yourself is a cinch if you can try it on in the store. If you're buying for someone else, it can be tricky. You want to be sure of a proper fit. Follow these tips to help you on your next belt shopping venture.

Luxury Belts

Formal and luxury belts for men and women typically fit more snugly than casual belts. Look for belts that go a few inches away from the buckle when the belt is fastened. This is typically two to three sizes larger than the pants or skirt. For example, if you have a 36-inch waist, a 38- to 40-inch belt will likely be the best fit. With formal styles, go shorter rather than longer. When purchasing high-end leather belts, consider a customized cut for an ideal fit.

Casual Belts

Casual belts are sometimes worn with longer slack in them. The belts dangle a little when fastened. To accomplish this, get a belt that's a little longer. In contrast to formal belts, cloth, rope and other casual belts can go longer rather than shorter. Sundresses, baggy pants and beach apparel are often accessorized with dangling belts. A casual braided belt uses a basic metal buckle with a metal tongue that fits into pieces of the braided leather to fit securely. You can adjust this belt easily between the leather braids.

Tight Fits

Certain styles, including tailored and military dress, aim for a tight fit. Cloth belts have a metal buckle and cap that snap into place. No excess extends beyond the buckle when fastened. These belts are true to the size of the waist or hip where they are worn. Weave them through the belt loops and fasten the buckle, and you'll have a snug, no-fuss fit.

Buckles and Tongues

Buckles make a difference in sizing and style. A buckle with a tongue allows the belt to slip through the metal. A tongue slides into a hole in the belt. If you want to find a belt size using a belt you already have, measure the belt where the tongue slides into the belt to fit you for the most accurate measurement.

Plates and Latches

Two other types of buckles include those with plates and latches. Buckles with flat metal or plastic plates have hooks on the back. The hooks attach to the front of the belts, sliding into place for a proper fit. Buckles with sliding latches allow the belt to glide through. A vertical-shaped peg pushes the belt into place.

MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET Have you ever want to make your own utility belt like superheros from comics? Well now you can with this set of instructions!

- 1 Craft foam sheets (Ethylene-vinyl acetate, EVA foam) of 3-5 mm thickness in any colors you choose
- 2 Scissors
- 3 Craft glue suitable for foam, or a hot glue gun with glue sticks.
- 4 fabric belt or waist strap with buckle or waist cincher, preferably made of nylon
- 5 12 inch ruler
- 6 markers/pencil for marking
- 7 2-3 pieces of graph paper (or any type of paper as substitute)
- 8 At least 5 feet of velcro (both the "fuzzy" side and the "rough" side)

Wrap the belt around your waist completely. Using the marker/pencil, mark a spot approximately 1.5 inches from where the belt completes your circumference. Cut a line following the mark you made, removing the excessive amounts of belt fabric.

Take a piece of graph paper (or any kind of paper, but graph works best) to trace out the needed dimensions of your desired pockets. Depending on what you want your pockets to hold (phone, wallet, mints, etc) it is best to measure the item's dimensions and translate those numbers to the template size. For the purpose of these instructions, we are building a 2.25 inch by 3 inch decorative pocket.

From the bottom right corner of a piece of graph paper count 15 squares to the left (3.75 in), make a line on the bottom edge of the grid where you counted.

From the bottom left end of the line measure 12 squares up (3 in), make connecting line with corner (left) bottom of previous line

Make line connecting to previous line 3 squares right(.75 in)

Make line connecting to previous line up 17 squares (4.75 in), starting with square above previous line

Make line connecting to previous line right 9 squares(2.25 in)

Now do the instructions in reverse, starting with 17 squares down.

Cut out along the lines that were made. (It should look like a mallet. Insert photo here)

Once you have created your desired template, cut it out

Take a piece of foam. If you wish to add decor to the pockets, embellish them PRIOR to gluing them to the tool belt.

Using your template, trace the template on the foam piece. Cut out the foam shape.

Now take the long end of the foam cutout and wrap/fold it around to create the back and 'flap' of the pocket. Fold the two side flaps to the back of pocket and attach them using glue (or anything really). Glue the top flap down on the front. (for added detail, glue a strip of foam along the edge for depth. Get creative)

Take ends of both the fuzzy strip and coarse strip and make a "T" with the fuzzy strip end facing vertically, and coarse strip horizontally. Fuzzy strip 3 edges must meet and interlock with middle of coarse strip. Cut fuzzy strip where it no longer is on coarse strip

Take fuzzy square and put it on end 3 edges of coarse strip cut off matching square for coarse strip

Measure out 4 feet of velcro (smooth/loop side) or however long belt is and attach to side of belt where buckle will be facing. Measure out the same length of rough/hooked velcro and place it on the back side.

If your belt has extra length left over, place rough velcro on the back of it. It will stick to the front of the belt.

Prior to this step, ensure that the glue used on/in your pockets is dry.

With the "fuzzy" side of your belt facing out (helps prevent you from scratching your arms up while using the belt), cut three rectangles from the leftover "rough" Velcro. These will be utilized for your pockets.

When all the glue settles and you apply the pockets to the velcro, the finish product should look like this.

Enjoy!
